Michael Fitzgerald, RN, CNS-BC, Executive Director, Behavioral Health Services at El Camino Hospital; and

Laura Griffith, MA- Primary Therapist for The Lotus Collaborative is passionate about helping to advance the field of eating disorders. She has been working to help people find and develop their innate strengths for her entire career, first as an elementary and middle school teacher and now as a clinician. As a clinician, she has worked with at-risk high school students as well as adolescents and adults. She chose to work at Lotus because its philosophy applies both "science and soul" to the healing process, a concept that resonates with her.

Thomas Tarshis, MD, MPH and Bay Area Children's Association Medical Director and Adjunct Clinical Faculty for the Department of Psychiatry at Stanford. Dr. Tarshis's philosophy is that to solve mental health problems in children the entire family unit must participate in treatment. Rarely is there a condition that can be cured through medication alone. He works with bullying and victimization and is the author of "Living with Peer Pressure and Bullying", written for teens.

NAMI Basics is the new signature education program for parents and other caregivers of children and adolescents living with mental illnesses. The course consists of six weekly classes, each lasting for two hours.

Goals of the NAMI Basics:

- To give the parent/caregiver the basic information necessary to take the best care possible of their child, their family, and themselves.
- To help the parent/caregiver cope with the impact that mental illness has on the child living with the illness and the entire family.
- To provide tools for the parent/caregiver to use even after completing the program that will assist in making the best decisions possible for the care of the child.
- Information on advocacy initiatives designed to improve and expand services.

The NAMI Provider Education Program promotes a new model of collaborative family therapy. It is based on the understanding that people suffering from mental disorders have a better prognosis with the help of a supportive family. The format is innovative, interactive and dynamic, presented by a team of consumers, family members and Ellen Adams, LMFT.

Peer to Peer is a unique, experiential learning program for people with any serious mental illness who are interested in establishing and maintaining their wellness and recovery. The course consists of 10 two-hour classes and is taught by a team of two trained 'Mentors' who are personally experienced at living well with mental illness.

April 4 through May 5, 2014
Five Fridays: 11:30 - 2:30
Contact info@namiscc.org
831-229-2675

Thursdays May 1 - July 5
2:00 to 4:00 p.m.
Old Sash Mill Complex
303 Potrero, Bldg 42
Suite 103, Santa Cruz

Goals and Objectives

- You will gain a working understanding of the bio-psycho-social model of collaborative treatment
- You will gain insight into the lived experience of mental illness
- You will have a working understanding of adaptation to diagnosis, medication and treatment.
- You will gain an appreciation of the positive outcomes of team collaboration where people struggling with mental illness, family members and professionals work together.

Each Class contains a combination of lecture and interactive exercise material and closes with Mindfulness Practice. Classes build on each other, therefore attendance each week is required.

"I was struck by how the NAMI Peer to Peer program is about us. It's very humanistic and informative. I am so glad I can now find support and information that goes beyond what therapists share. The brain information is what only the best psychiatrists share. I look forward to unfolding the many aspects that NAMI Peer to Peer addresses.".. quote by recent Santa Cruz Peer to Peer student.

Volunteer Spotlight

Tristan Arviso (aka Phonetic)

Written by Jennifer Wentworth

adayinthelifeofbeingbipolar.blogspot.com

Tristan Arviso is a local rap and hip hop artist who has struggled with his own recovery from Bipolar Disorder. Music has allowed Tristan to overcome many challenges in his life, using it as a creative outlet to share his story and message of hope with others. By volunteering for NAMI as an Ending the Silence peer storyteller, Parents and Teachers as Allies and UCSC Presenter, he is able to help other people understand the realities and struggles of living with mental illness while instilling hope of recovery to others. Public Speaking enables him to give people a personal view instead of societies view of what mental illness looks like. He has a deep passion for speaking to high school students and says he wants to spread hope and understanding about mental illness to young people. He says, "Speaking brings more healing to me every time I present my story and realize how far I've come since first being diagnosed."

Tristan, better known by his artistic name, Phonetic released his latest album two months ago which included a song called, "Killing the Stigma." This song has a powerful mental health anti-stigma message. In his song he describes the illness, society's view of the person with mental illness and the person living with it in 3 different segments. Tristan's music has begun to spread to different countries from around the world. His music and lyrics come from real life issues and he uses, TV, news and other artists as his inspiration. He performs "Killing the Stigma" during his ETS high school presentations. Some of Tristan's coping skills are being with his friends, dancing, his music, church, running and cross fit. Tristan truly has an inspiring story to tell.

Depression: Does Talk Therapy Work?

by Susan H. Shane (<http://sciencetoliveby.blogspot.com/>) 2/21/14

When I was seven, I kept a journal. One sentence summarized each day. Typical sentences were "Daddy hated me today." "Mommy was mean to me." Looking back at these sentences after having finally been diagnosed with major depressive disorder (MDD) at the age of 37, I recognized the hallmarks of my depression in those daily summaries.

One in six Americans will have MDD during their lifetime. There are nearly 15 million (6.7%) adults living with depression, far more women than men. Among pre-teens, 2.5% of children have MDD (equal number of girls and boys), and the percentage grows to 8.3% of teens. At puberty the number of depressed girls exceeds the number of depressed boys.

Curious about the current data on treating depression with psychotherapy (aka talk therapy) alone, I dove into the professional literature. Surprisingly, several different types of talk therapy (all relatively short-term, with usually weekly sessions over six to 20 weeks) consistently have been shown to be nearly equally effective in treating MDD. A large analysis of studies involving over 15,000 patients (Barth et al. 2013) came to this conclusion while commenting that an individual needs to look for a good fit with a particular type of talk therapy; not all types help all people. The bottom line is that many psychotherapies work except for what is called "supportive therapy" in which a therapist simply listens sympathetically, comforts and encourages the patient.

A couple of elements of talk therapy turn out to be critical in helping people with depression. First, the therapy needs to be "bonafide" meaning provided by a trained therapist using a method documented as being effective. Second, the competence of the therapist is critical.

Talk Therapy and Medication

How does talk therapy alone compare with medication alone or a combination of the two approaches in terms of effective treatment for MDD? Most studies, as well as meta-analyses which combine the data from many different studies for a larger sample size, show that talk therapies are basically equivalent to antidepressant medications in their effectiveness at treating depression. My own experience differs from this conclusion in that years of talk therapy never relieved my depression, but my first Prozac at age 37 was nearly instantaneous in relieving me of depressive symptoms: after just three weeks on Prozac, I did not have depression for five years. I've found, with age, that I must stay on Prozac daily, or I will sink into depression. I visit my psychotherapist on an as-needed basis, as well. My experience confirms what is commonly noted in medicine these days and what is the main take-away advice here: treatment needs to be individualized.

Types of talk therapy shown to be effective at reducing symptoms of MDD:

- Cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT) — focuses on changing negative thinking) (strongest evidence, perhaps because more studies have been done)
- Interpersonal therapy (IPT) (short, highly structured)
- Behavioral activation (focus on positive)
- Problem solving therapy (define problems and come up with multiple solutions)
- Psychodynamic therapy (past unresolved conflicts and relationships)
- Social skills therapy (relationship skills)

And finally, the role of psychotropic drugs in protecting and healing the brain (neuro-protection).

Suicide Prevention

Did you know that the local Suicide Crisis Line is available for anyone, anytime? We continue to live in a world where feelings of sadness, despair, and frustration are not often welcomed or shared as readily as feelings of happiness or joy. We all experience loss, stress, and change, as well as the sense of aloneness that comes from bearing them in silence. Sometimes, we struggle to find the words or find a place to share these experiences — we feel overwhelmed and alone. At these times, we perhaps simply need someone to listen, to care, or to stay on the line with us as we share our pain, our struggles, or our hopes — someone to “walk” beside us. Even when we have family members, friends, counselors, or others we might normally go to for support, there are times when we may hesitate to ask for help or reach out.

At Suicide Prevention Service, you do not have to wait until you or someone you love is in a crisis or in danger. Please call us 24 hours a day to speak to one of our trained and compassionate volunteers:

Take a look at the new information on our website! namisc.org

We've added a lot of information to our Local Treatment and Resources pages; Public and Private Pay Resources, Legal Help, Link to our Youth Website, and Respite Care. This information was collected from our members and while the volunteers at NAMI have not vetted or contacted these sources we wanted to make them available to our community. We are especially excited about local organizations; Easter Seals, Comforcare and Care.com who offer local Respite services.
